Workshops

"teaching best future practice
to the best new producers"

What is Maia?

Maia Workshops is an advanced training programme for emerging European producers, aiming at providing them with the fundamental creative and managerial skills needed to steer a fiction or documentary project through the different phases of development, production and distribution. A particular attention is dedicated to new and innovative ways of financing, co-producing and marketing european low-budget films.

How does it work?

Maia is structured in three independent five-day residential workshops. Each one offers a tight combination of case-studies, theoretical lessons and practical exercises, specific work on participants' projects and one-to-one meetings with tutors and trainers. And of course, great networking opportunities.

Maia also offers participants bonus activities, carried out in collaboration with the European Film Market during the Berlin Film Festival in February, and the New Cinema Network scheme of the Rome International Film Festival in October.

Maia Masterclasses are organised sporadically throughout the year in collaboration with local institutions in different European countries. Check our website for further information.

Who should apply?

The Maia workshops are targeted for new European film and television producers and recent graduates, as well as scriptwriters, directors, production managers and other industry professionals interested in acquiring production skills. Maia also accepts a limited number of participants from non-EU states.
