

EDN launches new edition of their documentary portal edn.dk

Copenhagen, December 10, 2009

EDN, European Documentary Network, has launched a new version of their web site. The new edition of edn.dk offers a variety of tools for developing, funding, & distributing your documentary, a number of networking databases as well as the latest news and information from the international documentary scene.

The updated and improved features on the EDN site are among others:

- The EDN Financing Guide in a searchable version
- The EDN Online Forum featuring sessions with leading international financiers and industry professional
- Doc Events with a comprehensive overview of funding deadlines, markets, pitching sessions, seminars and other events
- News on the latest stories from the international documentary scene
- A festival database for locating festivals relevant for your film

In addition to these knowledge based functions on the new EDN web site, the networking tools, profile features and possibilities for promoting your latest documentary has also been improved. Making the new EDN web a much more vibrant network platform for international documentary professionals.

All these features come in a new design with an easy to navigate structure. This makes it easy to locate and navigate in the comprehensive knowledge sections and the many funding and networking tools available on the new EDN web site.

The newly appointed Head of EDN Cecilia Lidin says: I think the new EDN web site in many ways captures the essence of EDN. It is all about networking and sharing knowledge in relation to international development and co-productions of creative documentaries.

EDN will mark the opening of the new site by having Cynthia Kane from ITVS International present for a session at The EDN Online Forum tonight at 18:00.
